

Wordy Roses Hurlled at Woman Candidate

Courtly Southern Gentleman Defending Seat in Congress and Woman Republican Who Runs Against Him Conduct Most Polite Campaign

By CAROLEN VANCE
Special Correspondent of The Standard-Examiner.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Standard-Examiner)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The politest passage d'armes ever witnessed is today engrossing the attention of North Carolina.

Major Charles M. Stedman, courtly southern gentleman and Democrat, is defending the seat he now holds in the house of national representatives against the ladylike assaults of the Republican nominee, Mrs. Lindsey Patterson, also of gentle southern birth.

The soft tongued strategy both use in the campaign sounds strange, indeed, in this day of more or less violently vituperative politics. He bombards her with bouquets. She, too, avoids the use of brickbats in favor of more amiable ammunition.

"Mrs. Patterson is one of the finest women in the state," is gallantly typical of his remarks.

"Major Stedman is noted for his charming manners, and he is the politest man I ever knew," is graciously characteristic of her.

The "imperial fifth" district, the scene of this bouquet battle, is fragrant and the flowery compliments that are showered promiscuously about. The place editors with the golden opinions that are scattered in such a free-handed manner.

Major Stedman not only pols his opponent with praises but he works in a lot of subtle flattery on the women voters with an experienced hand.

PATRIARCHAL LOOK.
"I'm afraid I am going to beat Mrs. Patterson in the election because you know the ladies will all vote for me," he boasts twinkling-eyed, which only goes to show how incorrigible masculinity persists in spite of age. Major Stedman is impressively 81 years old.

Among his indifferent looking colleagues in the house he rears a satisfying statesmanlike figure.

Below the shining white nimbus of hair appears an intellectual expanse of forehead, brows avalanching snow-like over eyes bespeaking vigorous life. A patriarchal beard completes an imposing appearance. An aura of venerable romance surrounds him also because he is the last Confederate soldier in congress. He fought under Lee from the beginning of the war to Appomattox and was wounded three times.

WOMAN ENERGETIC.

Mrs. Patterson is a whirlwind of energy. Her motor car, which she has named the "Washington Special," and in which she announces she hopes to ride to Washington, will be in every part of her district between now and election day. Already she has motored 8,000 miles in the "imperial fifth." There are eleven counties in the district. Mrs. Patterson figures she will have spent a week in each.

The opponents in this campaign are well matched as far as family and tradition are concerned. Major Stedman is from a family that has been prominent in North Carolina for generations. Mrs. Patterson's grandfather was General Patterson, whose cousin, Betsey Patterson, married Jerome Bonaparte. Joseph Bonaparte was her grandfather's friend and many of the furnishings in the Patterson mansion in Winston-Salem, N. C., came from Joseph Patterson.

The candleburn in the blue room of the White House was originally given by Napoleon to Joseph when the former was king of Spain. They were brought by him to this country and given to General Patterson who in turn presented them to the White House.

GREAT SOCIAL PRESTIGE.

The home of Mrs. Patterson in Winston-Salem is said to contain the finest collection of antiques in the south. Her special hobby is antique furniture. She is a writer on agricultural subjects and has done special research work in Revolutionary history. She is a member of the Acorn club of Philadelphia and of the Colony club of New York and enthusiastically follows the work of the Garden club of America. She organized the Federation of Women's Clubs in North Carolina and was the first state president. Another prominent club position held by her is that of vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution in North Carolina.

All of this will give some idea of her social prestige and will prove that she is not merely a "Yankee" imported for the purpose of running on the Republican ticket.

DEMOCRATIC STRONGHOLD.
Major Stedman recognizes the thoroughbred quality of his opponent and true to the chivalric traditions of the south he has never said a derogatory word concerning her.

"Southern men believe in always being polite and deferential to all women," he says.

They are polite, yes. They love to go jousting for a lady's favor in the realms of romance. They lend their strong right arms for the ladies to lean upon. But will they give them support at the polls? They are traditionally willing to risk their lives for a lady's whim. But will they go smiling to their political deaths if that whim takes the form of a

SALT LAKE SOCIETY

(Continued From Page Six)

Miss La Rue Smith and Mrs. A. H. Park.

Following the marriage of Miss Margaret Alan Taylor and Gilbert Alfred Reeves of Los Angeles, which took place Thursday in the Salt Lake temple, a wedding breakfast was served by Mrs. Frank Johnson at her home, 1139 East Ninth South street. The ceremony was performed by Apostle Stephen L. Richards. Purple asters and pink snapdragons formed centerpieces for one long table and two smaller ones, at which breakfast was served. The flowers were arranged in a silver basket on the large table. Covers were laid for twenty-four. Red zinnias were used in the decorations in African marigolds.

The couple left on a midnight train for San Francisco on a wedding trip. They will make their home at 257 Browning street, from where they will be going away in a gown of brown duvetyne and velvet, trimmed in mink fur, with hat and boots to match.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Cardall entertained at a reception Wednesday evening at their home, 436 H street, in honor of the young couple.

The reception room was decorated in autumn leaves and zinnias in rich fall colorings. Red zinnias were used in the music room. A yellow color scheme was carried out in the dining room. A basket of African marigolds formed the centerpiece for the supper table on a stony cover over yellow. Yellow candles further emphasized the color idea.

Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Cardall in receiving the guests were E. Y. Taylor, father of the bride; Mrs. H. A. Reeves, grandmother of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sands and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Evans. Assisting in the dining room were Miss Jennie Harrington, Miss Mary Harrington, Miss Ruth Taylor, Miss Virginia Evans, Miss Julia Taylor and Miss Lolo Hanson. Music was furnished by Mrs. Edna Evans Johnson, Mrs. E. H. Beckstrand, Mrs. L. R. Taylor and Miss Rachel Anderson.

One hundred and twenty-five guests were in attendance.

Miss Lyle Newman, a fall bride, was the guest of honor at a dinner given Tuesday night at the Hotel Utah by the Juliette club. The table had a centerpiece of zinnias.

Covers were laid for the following: Miss Ruby Jarvis, Miss Lucile Thorpe, Miss Grace Blake, Miss Elva Paul, Miss Melba Griffith, Miss Charlotte Burton, Miss Lucy Newman, Miss Carrie Sherrod, Miss Frankie Mizell, Miss Isabel Halton and Mrs. Oscar Mortensen.

Members of the music section of the Ladies' Literary club, of which Mrs. J. W. Alford is chairman, entertained at tea Tuesday afternoon at the clubhouse, following a program in which Utah composers were featured.

Marigolds, dahlias and asters were used in decorations. The tea table had a centerpiece of purple asters. Mrs. George F. Wasson presided at the tea table. Those serving were Mrs. Raymond Ackerman, Mrs. Guy S. Anderson, Mrs. L. D. Anderson, Mrs. J. A. Aylett, Mrs. R. W. Barnes and Mrs. John H. Barnhart.

The following program was well given: Talk on the work of the music clubs of America, Mrs. John Brunblay; "Mother," by Grace Toot Malmsten, Miss Melba Judd, composer, at the piano. "Mood of a Mandarin" and "Value of a Viennese Doll," by Henry Souvaine, played by the composer at the piano.

"I Seek My Love," an Indian love lyric, by E. Cecil Gates, and "The Gypsy Way," by C. W. Reid, Mrs. Myrtle Orr, with Mr. Reid at the piano.

"Slumber and Dream" and "Dance Takane," by Amedee Tremblay, played by the composer.

"Under the Balcony," by Spencer Clasen, parlor; "Heute, Nue Heute," by Tracy Y. Cannon, Evangeline Thomas Beasley, with Mr. Cannon at the piano.

"A Rainy Day," by Arthur P. Freber, and "The Lost Child," by Arthur Shepard, Mrs. Katherine White, with John Brunblay, accompanist.

"Melody," by Charles Frederick Stayner, Miss Alice Anderson.

The marriage of Miss Dora Sander and J. E. Johnson took place Wednesday night at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride on Kensington avenue. The ceremony was performed by Bishop Jacob Mauss.

The rooms were decorated in pink and white asters and roses. Supper was served at small tables on the lawn. Dancing was also enjoyed on the lawn.

The bride wore a gown of white charmeuse trimmed in pearls, with a veil caught with orange blossoms and she carried Ophelia roses. Mrs. M. L. Bean, matron of honor, wore white crepe satin. Miss Viola Sander, maid of honor, wore pink tulle. Miss Marvel Cowan, bridesmaid, wore peach colored crepe de chine. Miss Ione Vandewere wore jade green georgette. The maids and matrons carried bouquets with roses with their gowns. Clifton Polbee was best man.

Assisting the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Sander, in receiving the guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Sander and Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Houch. Mrs. E. Dehlin was in charge of the dining room and was assisted by Miss Marie Sparks, Miss Irene Sparks, Miss Eudace Smith, Miss Margaret Arpin and Miss Alice Sander.

The couple will make their home in San Francisco.

The wedding of Miss Reta McAllister and Joseph Reed took place Wednesday morning in the Salt Lake temple.

her mother, Mrs. H. S. Newman, and Miss Lucy Newman. Assisting in serving were Miss Virginia Jepperson, Miss Elsie Twitchell and Miss Grace Emery. Seventy-five guests were present.

The Juliette club will entertain this evening at the Hotel Utah in honor of the bride.

Miss Beatrice Ahern entertained Sunday afternoon at tea at her home in Houghton place in honor of Miss Marguerite LeCuyer, who will leave soon for Los Angeles to make her home with Mrs. E. C. Ahern assisted her daughter in receiving, and entertaining the guests. Those in attendance in addition to the guest of honor, were Mrs. F. F. LeCuyer, Mrs. Miss Lucile Greene, Miss Catherine Maher, Miss Ella McCallum, Miss Katherine Jensen, Mrs. Arthur Gunard, Miss Loretta Wegscheider, Miss Angela Hanrahan, Miss Eva Kay, Miss Veda Andrews, Miss Katherine Reilly.

Miss Reta McAllister, a bride of Wednesday, entertained at a trossseau tea given Sunday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. W. G. McAllister, on Coatsville avenue. A pink and lavender color scheme in the house decorations was carried out with roses, peonies and asters. A basket of pink roses formed a centerpiece for the tea table. Assisting in receiving in addition to the bride's mother, were Mrs. Joseph A. Smith and Mrs. James E. Wallis. Presiding in the dining room were Miss Thelma Jacobs and Miss Irma McEwan. The guests numbered 150.

Mrs. H. C. Goodrich entertained at tea at her home, 79 Virginia street, Monday afternoon in honor of Miss Grace Lindley of New York, national president of the women's auxiliary of the Episcopal church, who is in the city on her way from Portland, where she attended the general convention of the Episcopal church.

The guests included members of the women's auxiliary of St. Mark's cathedral.

A Madeira cover was on the tea table. Purple, white and rose-colored asters formed a centerpiece. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. George Y. Wallace and Mrs. Emma Moulton. Assisting in serving were Miss Gertrude Rose, about fifty guests were in attendance.

Miss Viola Hall, a bride of this week, was entertained at a Kensington tea Monday afternoon by Mrs. Emerald Hanson at her home on Douglas avenue.

A basket of pink roses on a Madeira cover formed the centerpiece for the tea table. Astors and zinnias were used to decorate the living room. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Merdin D. Kimball and Miss Laurene Southwick.

The guests included Miss Hall, Mrs. Moshah Hall, Mrs. Milton P. Fletcher, Mrs. Jesse K. Smith, Mrs. Maurice Anderson, Mrs. N. J. Hansen, Mrs. G. Merlin Southwick, Mrs. Clyde F. Hansen, Mrs. Conway Ashton, Mrs. Verner O. Hewlett, Miss Josephine Hall, Miss Mary Butler, Miss Lucile Cluff, Miss Maurine Barnes, Miss Rhea Croft and Miss LaRue Hansen.

Miss Lyle Newman, a fall bride, entertained at a trossseau tea Sunday afternoon at her home. Astors and zinnias were used to decorate the rooms. The hostess was assisted by

To Customers of

Utah Power & Light Co.

and Other Local People

REALIZING the great value of a closer interest with those upon whose good will and patronage the business of Utah Power & Light Co. is founded, its customers and other local residents are invited to invest in shares of the company's 7% Cumulative Preferred Stock, and thus become partners in its successful and rapidly growing business.

The company has never failed to pay dividends on its Preferred Stock. For over 9 years, ever since the stock was issued, dividends have been promptly paid, regularly and promptly every three months, on January 1, April 1, July 1, and October 1.

You now have the opportunity, by purchasing this stock, to invest your savings in a safe, conservative, vitally essential local industry.

Thousands of local people already own shares of our Preferred Stock.

Believing that a large number would like to become partners in the Company, we are offering the stock for cash and on a most liberal Easy Payment Plan, thereby placing it within the reach of everyone.

Such a partnership will be to our mutual advantage. In becoming a stockholder you will gain by receiving an income from a firmly established business with a steady and growing demand for its service.

The company will gain from you a more cordial interest in its affairs and a better understanding of what a well managed light and power company means to the life and growth of the territory it serves.

The cities, towns and communities served will gain because the money thus obtained will make possible extensions and additions to the company's system and provide greater facilities to keep pace with the growing demand for electricity, which will attract more industries to this part of the country, thereby increasing the general prosperity.

When investing in this stock, you may feel sure that you are investing in a company equipped to serve a widely diversified field in a steadily growing territory. The Company's service is an absolute necessity of every-day life and consequently we can offer you most substantial protection as to your principal and the regular payment of dividends.

At the present price of $96.00 and dividend for each $100.00 share, the stock pays over 7 1/4 per cent on the dollar, and we extend to you, in a spirit of friendly co-operation, an opportunity to invest in this safe, dividend-paying security.

Utah Power & Light Co.

FREE BOOKLET COUPON

Utah Power & Light Co.,

General Offices, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Please send me illustrated booklet, containing (1) More information about Utah Power & Light Co. Preferred Stock, (2) Details of Easy Payment Plan, (3) How to Judge an Investment.

Name .....

Address .....

Long Distance Honeymooner

Marie Harrison, Pittsburg, just married at New Orleans to Dr. J. M. Lima, who started on the longest honeymoon on record. Her husband is inspector of consulates for Guatemala and they'll visit every city in the world where that country has a consulate.

ENGLAND TIRES OF AMERICAN FLATTERY

LONDON, Sept. 30.—American visitors to London, especially prominent ones, are inclined to say pleasant things to their hosts, and Englishmen are not disinclined to listen. The latest example of this was given by Governor Cox of Ohio, who is quoted by the Daily Mail as saying some very pleasing things about London as a city.

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure by means of a Marmola Prescription Tablet method of reducing fat. It is safe to say that we have nothing better for the causing of "winkles" the help of exercising or dieting, or interference with one's meals is a mighty important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a catalogue of good results follow the use of these pleasant, harmless and economical little fat reducers. We say economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription) can be obtained by any druggist the world over or from the Marmola Company, 4612 Woodward avenue, Detroit, Mich., for one dollar a case, which is a decidedly economical price, considering the number of tablets each case contains. They are harmless.—Advertisement.

Wordy Roses Hurlled at Woman Candidate

Courtly Southern Gentleman Defending Seat in Congress and Woman Republican Who Runs Against Him Conduct Most Polite Campaign

By CAROLEN VANCE
Special Correspondent of The Standard-Examiner.
(Copyright, 1922, by The Standard-Examiner)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The politest passage d'armes ever witnessed is today engrossing the attention of North Carolina.

Major Charles M. Stedman, courtly southern gentleman and Democrat, is defending the seat he now holds in the house of national representatives against the ladylike assaults of the Republican nominee, Mrs. Lindsey Patterson, also of gentle southern birth.

The soft tongued strategy both use in the campaign sounds strange, indeed, in this day of more or less violently vituperative politics. He bombards her with bouquets. She, too, avoids the use of brickbats in favor of more amiable ammunition.

"Mrs. Patterson is one of the finest women in the state," is gallantly typical of his remarks.

"Major Stedman is noted for his charming manners, and he is the politest man I ever knew," is graciously characteristic of her.

The "imperial fifth" district, the scene of this bouquet battle, is fragrant and the flowery compliments that are showered promiscuously about. The place editors with the golden opinions that are scattered in such a free-handed manner.

Major Stedman not only pols his opponent with praises but he works in a lot of subtle flattery on the women voters with an experienced hand.

PATRIARCHAL LOOK.
"I'm afraid I am going to beat Mrs. Patterson in the election because you know the ladies will all vote for me," he boasts twinkling-eyed, which only goes to show how incorrigible masculinity persists in spite of age. Major Stedman is impressively 81 years old.

Among his indifferent looking colleagues in the house he rears a satisfying statesmanlike figure.

Below the shining white nimbus of hair appears an intellectual expanse of forehead, brows avalanching snow-like over eyes bespeaking vigorous life. A patriarchal beard completes an imposing appearance. An aura of venerable romance surrounds him also because he is the last Confederate soldier in congress. He fought under Lee from the beginning of the war to Appomattox and was wounded three times.

WOMAN ENERGETIC.

Mrs. Patterson is a whirlwind of energy. Her motor car, which she has named the "Washington Special," and in which she announces she hopes to ride to Washington, will be in every part of her district between now and election day. Already she has motored 8,000 miles in the "imperial fifth." There are eleven counties in the district. Mrs. Patterson figures she will have spent a week in each.

The opponents in this campaign are well matched as far as family and tradition are concerned. Major Stedman is from a family that has been prominent in North Carolina for generations. Mrs. Patterson's grandfather was General Patterson, whose cousin, Betsey Patterson, married Jerome Bonaparte. Joseph Bonaparte was her grandfather's friend and many of the furnishings in the Patterson mansion in Winston-Salem, N. C., came from Joseph Patterson.

The candleburn in the blue room of the White House was originally given by Napoleon to Joseph when the former was king of Spain. They were brought by him to this country and given to General Patterson who in turn presented them to the White House.

GREAT SOCIAL PRESTIGE.

The home of Mrs. Patterson in Winston-Salem is said to contain the finest collection of antiques in the south. Her special hobby is antique furniture. She is a writer on agricultural subjects and has done special research work in Revolutionary history. She is a member of the Acorn club of Philadelphia and of the Colony club of New York and enthusiastically follows the work of the Garden club of America. She organized the Federation of Women's Clubs in North Carolina and was the first state president. Another prominent club position held by her is that of vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution in North Carolina.

All of this will give some idea of her social prestige and will prove that she is not merely a "Yankee" imported for the purpose of running on the Republican ticket.

DEMOCRATIC STRONGHOLD.
Major Stedman recognizes the thoroughbred quality of his opponent and true to the chivalric traditions of the south he has never said a derogatory word concerning her.

"Southern men believe in always being polite and deferential to all women," he says.

They are polite, yes. They love to go jousting for a lady's favor in the realms of romance. They lend their strong right arms for the ladies to lean upon. But will they give them support at the polls? They are traditionally willing to risk their lives for a lady's whim. But will they go smiling to their political deaths if that whim takes the form of a rant and the flowery compliments that are showered promiscuously about. The place editors with the golden opinions that are scattered in such a free-handed manner.

Major Stedman not only pols his opponent with praises but he works in a lot of subtle flattery on the women voters with an experienced hand.

PATRIARCHAL LOOK.
"I'm afraid I am going to beat Mrs. Patterson in the election because you know the ladies will all vote for me," he boasts twinkling-eyed, which only goes to show how incorrigible masculinity persists in spite of age. Major Stedman is impressively 81 years old.

Among his indifferent looking colleagues in the house he rears a satisfying statesmanlike figure.

Below the shining white nimbus of hair appears an intellectual expanse of forehead, brows avalanching snow-like over eyes bespeaking vigorous life. A patriarchal beard completes an imposing appearance. An aura of venerable romance surrounds him also because he is the last Confederate soldier in congress. He fought under Lee from the beginning of the war to Appomattox and was wounded three times.

WOMAN ENERGETIC.

Mrs. Patterson is a whirlwind of energy. Her motor car, which she has named the "Washington Special," and in which she announces she hopes to ride to Washington, will be in every part of her district between now and election day. Already she has motored 8,000 miles in the "imperial fifth." There are eleven counties in the district. Mrs. Patterson figures she will have spent a week in each.

The opponents in this campaign are well matched as far as family and tradition are concerned. Major Stedman is from a family that has been prominent in North Carolina for generations. Mrs. Patterson's grandfather was General Patterson, whose cousin, Betsey Patterson, married Jerome Bonaparte. Joseph Bonaparte was her grandfather's friend and many of the furnishings in the Patterson mansion in Winston-Salem, N. C., came from Joseph Patterson.

The candleburn in the blue room of the White House was originally given by Napoleon to Joseph when the former was king of Spain. They were brought by him to this country and given to General Patterson who in turn presented them to the White House.

GREAT SOCIAL PRESTIGE.

The home of Mrs. Patterson in Winston-Salem is said to contain the finest collection of antiques in the south. Her special hobby is antique furniture. She is a writer on agricultural subjects and has done special research work in Revolutionary history. She is a member of the Acorn club of Philadelphia and of the Colony club of New York and enthusiastically follows the work of the Garden club of America. She organized the Federation of Women's Clubs in North Carolina and was the first state president. Another prominent club position held by her is that of vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution in North Carolina.

All of this will give some idea of her social prestige and will prove that she is not merely a "Yankee" imported for the purpose of running on the Republican ticket.

DEMOCRATIC STRONGHOLD.
Major Stedman recognizes the thoroughbred quality of his opponent and true to the chivalric traditions of the south he has never said a derogatory word concerning her.

"Southern men believe in always being polite and deferential to all women," he says.

They are polite, yes. They love to go jousting for a lady's favor in the realms of romance. They lend their strong right arms for the ladies to lean upon. But will they give them support at the polls? They are traditionally willing to risk their lives for a lady's whim. But will they go smiling to their political deaths if that whim takes the form of a rant and the flowery compliments that are showered promiscuously about. The place editors with the golden opinions that are scattered in such a free-handed manner.

Major Stedman not only pols his opponent with praises but he works in a lot of subtle flattery on the women voters with an experienced hand.

PATRIARCHAL LOOK.
"I'm afraid I am going to beat Mrs. Patterson in the election because you know the ladies will all vote for me," he boasts twinkling-eyed, which only goes to show how incorrigible masculinity persists in spite of age. Major Stedman is impressively 81 years old.

Among his indifferent looking colleagues in the house he rears a satisfying statesmanlike figure.

Below the shining white nimbus of hair appears an intellectual expanse of forehead, brows avalanching snow-like over eyes bespeaking vigorous life. A patriarchal beard completes an imposing appearance. An aura of venerable romance surrounds him also because he is the last Confederate soldier in congress. He fought under Lee from the beginning of the war to Appomattox and was wounded three times.

WOMAN ENERGETIC.

Mrs. Patterson is a whirlwind of energy. Her motor car, which she has named the "Washington Special," and in which she announces she hopes to ride to Washington, will be in every part of her district between now and election day. Already she has motored 8,000 miles in the "imperial fifth." There are eleven counties in the district. Mrs. Patterson figures she will have spent a week in each.

The opponents in this campaign are well matched as far as family and tradition are concerned. Major Stedman is from a family that has been prominent in North Carolina for generations. Mrs. Patterson's grandfather was General Patterson, whose cousin, Betsey Patterson, married Jerome Bonaparte. Joseph Bonaparte was her grandfather's friend and many of the furnishings in the Patterson mansion in Winston-Salem, N. C., came from Joseph Patterson.

The candleburn in the blue room of the White House was originally given by Napoleon to Joseph when the former was king of Spain. They were brought by him to this country and given to General Patterson who in turn presented them to the White House.

GREAT SOCIAL PRESTIGE.

The home of Mrs. Patterson in Winston-Salem is said to contain the finest collection of antiques in the south. Her special hobby is antique furniture. She is a writer on agricultural subjects and has done special research work in Revolutionary history. She is a member of the Acorn club of Philadelphia and of the Colony club of New York and enthusiastically follows the work of the Garden club of America. She organized the Federation of Women's Clubs in North Carolina and was the first state president. Another prominent club position held by her is that of vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution in North Carolina.

All of this will give some idea of her social prestige and will prove that she is not merely a "Yankee" imported for the purpose of running on the Republican ticket.

DEMOCRATIC STRONGHOLD.
Major Stedman recognizes the thoroughbred quality of his opponent and true to the chivalric traditions of the south he has never said a derogatory word concerning her.

"Southern men believe in always being polite and deferential to all women," he says.

They are polite, yes. They love to go jousting for a lady's favor in the realms of romance. They lend their strong right arms for the ladies to lean upon. But will they give them support at the polls? They are traditionally willing to risk their lives for a lady's whim. But will they go smiling to their political deaths if that whim takes the form of a rant and the flowery compliments that are showered promiscuously about. The place editors with the golden opinions that are scattered in such a free-handed manner.

Major Stedman not only pols his opponent with praises but he works in a lot of subtle flattery on the women voters with an experienced hand.

PATRIARCHAL LOOK.
"I'm afraid I am going to beat Mrs. Patterson in the election because you know the ladies will all vote for me," he boasts twinkling-eyed, which only goes to show how incorrigible masculinity persists in spite of age. Major Stedman is impressively 81 years old.

Among his indifferent looking colleagues in the house he rears a satisfying statesmanlike figure.

Below the shining white nimbus of hair appears an intellectual expanse of forehead, brows avalanching snow-like over eyes bespeaking vigorous life. A patriarchal beard completes an imposing appearance. An aura of venerable romance surrounds him also because he is the last Confederate soldier in congress. He fought under Lee from the beginning of the war to Appomattox and was wounded three times.

WOMAN ENERGETIC.

Mrs. Patterson is a whirlwind of energy. Her motor car, which she has named the "Washington Special," and in which she announces she hopes to ride to Washington, will be in every part of her district between now and election day. Already she has motored 8,000 miles in the "imperial fifth." There are eleven counties in the district. Mrs. Patterson figures she will have spent a week in each.

The opponents in this campaign are well matched as far as family and tradition are concerned. Major Stedman is from a family that has been prominent in North Carolina for generations. Mrs. Patterson's grandfather was General Patterson, whose cousin, Betsey Patterson, married Jerome Bonaparte. Joseph Bonaparte was her grandfather's friend and many of the furnishings in the Patterson mansion in Winston-Salem, N. C., came from Joseph Patterson.

The candleburn in the blue room of the White House was originally given by Napoleon to Joseph when the former was king of Spain. They were brought by him to this country and given to General Patterson who in turn presented them to the White House.

GREAT SOCIAL PRESTIGE.

The home of Mrs. Patterson in Winston-Salem is said to contain the finest collection of antiques in the south. Her special hobby is antique furniture. She is a writer on agricultural subjects and has done special research work in Revolutionary history. She is a member of the Acorn club of Philadelphia and of